RESORT AT PAWS UP

GREENOUGH, MONTANA

This 37,000-acre working cattle ranch in Big Sky Country still sets the standard for swank outdoorsy stays. There are 28 posh cabins and five camps, but couples gravitate toward tucked-away "honey-moon" tents, which come with camp butlers, en suite bathrooms with copper soaking tubs for two, and candlelit picnics by the Blackfoot River. Pack your day with once-in-a-lifetime experiences like hot-air-balloon rides and a cattle drive with your own personal wrangler. All-inclusive doubles from $1,455; pawsup.com.

FOUR SEASONS TENTED CAMP GOLDEN TRIANGLE

THAILAND

Each opulent abode at this jungle resort in northern Thailand has an outdoor shower and river views, and some have a wooden hot tub on their veranda. But the true draw is the rescued elephants you can help bathe in the morning, then take on rain-forest treks during the day. When you're not learning how to be a mahout (elephant rider), cruise down the Mekong River on a traditional long-tail boat, explore the temples and markets of Chiang Rai, or sign up for a "mahout recovery" massage in the treetop spa. All-inclusive doubles from $2,463; fourseasons.com. —Pim Kemasingki

PACKING POINTER

Travel light. Taking a small plane to a remote resort? There may be strict restrictions on baggage weight. Luckily, a lot of luxe camps will gear you up. "Many have wellies, hiking boots, or cowboy boots on hand, so you can leave heavy shoes at home," says Jessica Ourisman, a travel advisor at Brownell Travel in Baltimore.
