COWGIRL HALL OF FAME HONOREES—MEET US IN MONTANA.

Sharon Camarillo | Former barrel racer and current equestrian teacher

As a teacher of all things equestrian, Sharon Camarillo has a rich background to draw upon. She rode her love of competition to a rodeo National Intercollegiate World Championship at Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo, California. Camarillo then competed on the pro rodeo circuit as a barrel racer—she was a four-time National Finals Rodeo qualifier. A teacher in every sense of the word, Camarillo loves to share her passion and knowledge of riding. Her clinics on handling horses and barrel racing draw big crowds. But at Paws Up, she'll just be teaching our Cowgirl Roundup attendees.

Veryl Goodnight | Accomplished Western sculptor and painter

Beauty may be in the eye of the beholder, but it's hard to imagine laying eyes on Veryl Goodnight's paintings of Western wildlife without appreciating the exquisite loveliness. Overall, Goodnight's body of work is as expansive as it is gorgeous. Her sculptures—more than 200 of them—further set her apart from other artists. Goodnight's art has appeared extensively in numerous books and been shown in museums, such as the Autry Museum of the American West. Imagine painting by her side, with a mountainous Montana backdrop. You can make that happen.

Marilyn Williams Harris | Ranch owner and champion rider

Marilyn Williams Harris is a true working cowgirl. Owning and comanaging her grandfather's historic Arizona ranch with her sister, Harris works on their cow-calf operation. Her lifelong passion for riding horses led to American Quarter Horse Association World Championships in the Reining and Working Cow Horse categories, among other honors. When it comes to enthusiasm about sustaining the cowgirl way of life for future generations, Harris has few peers. Her unbridled zest for the Western land stewardship is truly contagious.

Barbara Van Cleve | Award-winning Western ranch-life photographer

The passion Barbara Van Cleve has for Western ranch life is evident in everything she shoots. Her photography ranks with Western legends like William Albert Allard and Edward S. Curtis. With 55 solo exhibits under her belt buckle, Van Cleve exemplifies the grace and skill of Cowgirl Museum Hall of Famers. Her stunning book, Hard Twist: Western Ranch Women, rings true to life, perhaps in part because she was raised on a Montana ranch. The authentic flavor of the old West and the new West merge beautifully in Van Cleve's work. This is your chance to shoot the American West with the master herself.

Untether your inner cowgirl and join us for some riding, roping and relaxing.
